

Home / Haute Goat

July 27, 2018

Haute Goat

One of the CUTEST things we've done all summer is "The Haute Goat Shmurgle" at Haute Goat Farm near Port Hope, Ontario. As described by proud farm owners, Debbie and Shain, a shmurgle means to "snuggle, smooch, hug, or cuddle ANY animal but particularly and with emphasis – a Nigerian Dwarf Goat."

You want to go now too, right?!

When I say this is the cutest thing we've done this summer, I'm talking about the ENTIRE DEAL. The property is cute. Debbie and Shain are cute. The other staff are cute. The visitors are cute (because everything around them is cute). The alpacas you visit for a "warm-up shmurgle" are cute. And the goats.....ARE REALLY, REALLY DARN CUTE.

WE ARE THE PARKINSON FAMILY!

And this is where we make up for living miles and miles away. You'll feel like we're together. Promise!

Let's SOCIALIZE!

Find Me Here Too!

SCARY  MOMMY

HUFFPOST

Looking For Something?

Search the Site...

Search

Archives

Archives

Select Month

I don't remember how we came across this beautiful place, but I think it goes back to Juliet's obsession with goats (circa Fall 2017). If you recall, she wanted a "goat" party for her birthday last year and we were able to talk her into a Paw Patrol party instead. Well, after visiting Haute Goat this summer, it seems like a "goat" birthday party is back on the table, but THIS TIME AROUND, I'm not so panicked. The decor is done, people. Just gotta print and post the following:

